

HONORING PROFESSOR MARTIN WACHS

Throughout his career at the University of California, Professor Martin Wachs has embodied the highest standards for academic research, a legendary commitment to students, and remarkable personal integrity. His inspired teaching has prepared hundreds of students to make substantial contributions as planning and policy professionals in local, state and federal arenas, and many doctoral students have followed in Professor Wachs' path in accomplished academic careers.

Professor Wachs' current and former students are organizing a Fall lecture honor him upon his recent retirement and his contributions to education and research in transportation planning, policy, and finance. This lecture will be an annual event that attracts innovative and provocative thinkers to address the most pressing issues in transportation. An invitation to deliver the lecture named in his honor will be a mark of distinction. We are pleased to announce that Bent Flyvbjerg, Professor of Planning at Aalborg University, Denmark, and author of Megaprojects and Risk: An Anatomy of Ambition and Rationality and Power, will give the first lecture on October 17, 2006.
